In May 2015, Bush stated that he would have ordered the 2003 invasion of Iraq had he been President at the time: "I would have [authorized the invasion], and so would have Hillary Clinton, just to remind everybody. And so would almost everybody that was confronted with the intelligence they got." He also indicated that the lack of focus on post-invasion security was a mistake.[141] He later stated that "knowing what we know now, ...I would not have engaged". "I would not have gone into Iraq", he said. He also argued that the invasion—though perhaps inspired by faulty intelligence—had been beneficial, saying the world was "significantly safer" without Saddam Hussein in power.[142]

International relations and security

In May 2015, Bush stated that he would have ordered the 2003 invasion of Iraq had he been President at the time: "I would have [authorized the invasion], and so would have Hillary Clinton, just to remind everybody. And so would almost everybody that was confronted with the intelligence they got." He also indicated that the lack of focus on post-invasion security was a mistake.[141] He later stated that "knowing what we know now, ...I would not have engaged". "I would not have gone into Iraq", he said. He also argued that the invasion"though perhaps inspired by faulty intelligence"had been beneficial, saying the world was "significantly safer" without Saddam Hussein in power.[142]

In 2015, Bush said that he does not support a further major commitment of U.S. troops in Iraq to fight the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant (ISIS or ISIL), saying that such a deployment is not needed to defeat ISIS. [143] He has not, however, ruled out such a deployment in the future.[143] Bush favors building a new U.S. base in Iraq's al-Anbar province,[123] and has said that some U.S. troops ought to be embedded with Iraqi armed forces to help train them and identify targets as joint terminal attack controllers (JTACs).[127][143]

Bush has not commented on adding to the approximately 3,500 U.S. troops in Iraq now.[123]

In a speech, Bush said his brother, former President George W. Bush, was his main adviser on policy with the Middle East. Bush later clarified that he was referring to policy on Israel, rather than on the Middle East as a whole.[144][145]

Bush supports the continued collection of metadata of phone calls by the National Security Agency. [146] He also supports the USA Patriot Act, and criticized efforts by Senator Rand Paul and others to stop its reauthorization. Bush stated that Paul was "wrong" about the Patriot Act and stated that: "The Patriot Act has kept us safe, plain and simple. The metadata program has kept us safe, plain and simple. There's been no violation of civil liberties." [147]

Bush has called for increased military spending, expressing the belief that 2.5% of GDP is an insufficient amount.[148][149]

Bush has called the April 2015 Iran nuclear deal framework a "horrific deal" and said he would likely terminate any final agreement should he become president [127]. He has argued that the deal would not
